

Miss Rita Loyd Named Beauty Semi-Finalist

Miss Rita Loyd, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Loyd, 2631 North Robinson Road, has been named one of the five semi-finalists in the Miss Bulldog Beauty Contest at Texarkana College, replacing one of the original five who has dropped out of school.

Miss Loyd, a sophomore, finished sixth in the contest held October 25, in an extremely close race requiring four recounts.

Sponsored by the TC student newspaper, the Kennel, Miss Loyd finished second in this same contest last year. A graduate of Liberty-Eylau high school, she was a freshman class favorite last year.

Other semi-finalists in the contest are Miss Betty Boyce, Miss Connie Cox, Miss Patsy Griffith, and Miss Lola Simmons.

Photographs of the five semi-finalists will be sent to a celebrity, as yet unannounced, for final judging. The winner will be announced in May.

Last year's winner, Miss Jan Blair, formerly of Hooks, Texas, now living in Chattanooga, Tenn., was selected by Floyd Cramer, well-known popular pianist.

Miss Loyd replaces Miss Cynthia Jones, who dropped out of school early this month for "personal reasons."

Application Made For Membership

Texarkana College has applied for institutional membership in the Southern Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers.

The purposes of this association are to provide, by means of annual conferences and otherwise, for the spread of information and the interchange of ideas on problems of common interest; to contribute to the advancement of higher education in its fullest and broadest implications; to foster a friendly spirit of unity and cooperation among its members; to advance professionally the office or offices of admissions, registration and records; and to function as a unifying and coordinating agency among the separate state organizations.

Active membership is institutional. It is open to any collegiate institution which is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools which consists of eleven southern states.

Handbook Records Texarkana History

Two members of the Texarkana College history faculty, Robert Williams and Lewis Cannon, have been asked by the Texas State Historical Association to write an article on the Texarkana area for the "Handbook of Texas".

Joe B. Frantz, association director, wrote, "As a reflection of Texas' growing urbanism, we plan to include an article on each of the standard metropolitan statistical areas in the state."

Williams and Cannon have agreed to cover the assigned area of Texarkana, and the compiled information is to be used as a supplement to the "Handbook of Texas" and selected articles will be published above the names of the contributors.

The 1952 edition of the "Handbook of Texas" is available in the Texarkana College library.

Noted Author To Speak At Texarkana College

Bill Sands, author of the best-selling "My Shadow Ran Fast", will be the featured speaker in the Texarkana College assembly November 22 at 9:30 a.m. in the college auditorium.

Sands, who has appeared on many television programs, including the Art Linkletter show, has become a world-noted author and lecturer since his release from San Quintin prison, where he was a cellmate of the notorious Caryl Chessman.

This assembly will be open to the public; there will be no admission charge.

Speakers Explain Journalistic Jargon To Approximately 200 High School Students

'Oklahoma' Will Be Given Next Term

The music and drama departments of Texarkana College will present "Oklahoma" in April, departmental spokesmen have announced.

This Rodgers and Hammerstein musical enjoyed a record-breaking run on Broadway several years ago. Murry Alewine, chairman of the music division at the college, pointed out that to be eligible for the production a student must, during the second semester, be enrolled in either the band, the choir, or in a drama class.

Students who are interested in participating in the production may obtain additional information by contacting either Alewine, Mrs. Mildred Parsons, head of the drama department, or Barry Johnson, band director, at the College.

IBM Dance Best Yet

"I think it was the best dance we have had this year," announced Ken Burkhalter, Internal Data Processing Manager.

The IBM Dance was sponsored by the Circle K Club and the Blue Jackets. The music was supplied by Mouse and the Traps from Tyler, Texas. Approximately 300 people attended the dance. Tickets were sold at the door, and approximately 250 tickets were sold before the dance began.

Journalists and journalistic jargon ruled Thursday as high school journalism students met in the auditorium to talk shop.

Participating in the second annual high school journalism workshop, approximately 200 high school students and their sponsors registered at 9 a.m.

The annual workshop is designed to acquaint the students with career prospects in the field of journalism and to bring in experts to discuss various aspects of the field, according to TC News Director Bill Hughes.

Beginning at 9:30, the program featured Richard T. Bentley, general manager of the Palmer News Media, who informed the group of the careers in journalism; national editorial award winner Robert Fisher, editor and publisher of the Crossett, Ark., New Observer, who discussed editorial writing; and Rudolph Gandy, director of public relations at Southern State College, Magnolia, Ark., a former sports editor who talked on sports writing.

Other platform guests were Miss Patricia Hicks, assistant editor of the TC Kennel and an employee at the Texarkana Gazette, who spoke on feature writing, and Miss Jua Nyla Hutcheson, Kennel editor and also a Gazette employee, who talked on new writing.

The Wayne Poe Singers, a TC quartet who sing pop, folk and spiritual numbers, entertained the high school set. The group is composed of Wayne Joe, Jan Hiebert, Mary Ted Dugan and David Oubre.

Last year the workshop drew about 185 students and advisers.

Included among the high schools attending the workshop were Arkansas High, Texarkana; Avery, Texas; Dunbar High, Texarkana; Gurdon, Ark.; Hooks, Texas; Lewisville, Ark.; Liberty-Eylau; New Boston, Texas; Texas High, Texarkana; Washington High, Texarkana.

Hughes said that he felt the workshop was well-received, and he added that he hoped it would continue to attract large numbers of high school journalists in the years to come.

Nursing Instructor Presents Program

Mrs. Lou Humphrey, instructor of vocational nursing at Texarkana College, was in charge of a program for a meeting of the League of Nursing held at noon November 10 in the Central School Building of Wadley Hospital.

The theme of the meeting was "The Role of the Vocational Nurse in our Community."

Holidays

Classes will be dismissed at Texarkana College November 24 and 25 for the Thanksgiving holidays. They will resume at 8 a.m. Monday, November 28.

Dr. W. G. McAlexander, academic dean, pointed out that cuts on November 23 and 28 would be regarded as double cuts.

TC Instructor Teaching Girl Scouts First Aid

Dale Works, a member of the physical education faculty at Texarkana College, is currently conducting a safety and first aid course for the Beverly School Girl Scout Troop 263.

The course began November 8 and will continue for several more weeks. The troop leader is Mrs. Ernest Crowell.

Topics to be covered include artificial respiration, different ties with the triangular bandage, a study of the poisonous snakes of Texas, and the preparation of a list of different poisons found in the home.

Be Thankful

Next week is the day officially set aside in the United States for giving thanks. How long has it been since we truly gave thanks on Thanksgiving Day? Perhaps it's been too long. Many of our thoughts on this day are centered around a turkey—not what the turkey represents.

The TC Student Senate has proclaimed that this next week at TC will be "Thoughtful As Well As Thankful Week." We are being asked to "give where a gift is needed." What better way can one find to express his thankfulness than to share his blessings with others?

We in America are truly blessed . . . with freedom, with beauty, with a sense of pride in our country, its people, and its principles. Right here in Texarkana, there is a lot to be thankful for. One thing is our ability to attend college, to learn the lessons WE choose to learn. No one is telling us what to become.

Showing our thankfulness with thoughtfulness is a good way to express our appreciation to those who founded America, those in the past and present who suffer for her, die for her, and work to make her what she is . . . the greatest nation on the face of the earth.

We should give thanks every day of every week of every year. But for a start, next week let's be thoughtful as well as thankful and share our good fortune with those less fortunate. Divyavadana, an Indian philosopher, once said: "What we have done will not be lost to all eternity. Everything ripens at its time and becomes fruit at its hour."

Poor Attendance Plus

Well, Texarkana College students, CONGRATULATIONS! Last week you managed to show everyone at the College and those visiting the campus just exactly how interested you are in TC activities and programs. Your amount of interest measured close to nothing. In case some of you didn't realize it, assembly programs ARE part of the college activities.

One club, whose meeting was mistakenly scheduled for the same time as the assembly, turned out 'en masse' to hear the East Texas State University Choir perform. A few other clubs also attended the assembly. If they hadn't, there would have been more people in the choir than in the audience.

In spite of the discouraging lack of audience before which to perform, the ETSU Choir gave an excellent performance. The many TC students who missed them missed a good program. There was something for everyone.

Being a college student is more than just being a high school student with more freedom. Freedom brings responsibility. As a student at TC, you have a responsibility to support the functions of the college. If you don't support them voluntarily, you may be forced to support them. When that day comes, and it will come if TC continues its present course of disinterest, there will be great gnashing of teeth, pulling of hair, weeping and wailing, etc., among the student body. But you, the students, will have no one to blame but yourselves.

Admittedly, there have been some pretty dull assemblies in the past, but that doesn't mean that all assemblies are going to be boring. A lot of time and effort has gone into planning the programs at TC this year. So far the quality has been good; unfortunately, the same cannot be said of the attendance.

Football-Loving Dove Hunter To Work on Ph.D. in History

Dove hunting, swimming, dancing, football games and history—these are the activities of Charles S. Gallien, the new assistant professor of history at Texarkana College.

Right now, reading historical works for "pleasure" engulfs his time, for he is preparing himself for work on his Ph.D. in history from Louisiana State University. He will begin studies this summer.

The thesis that he wrote for his MA in history will be published next year by the Louisiana Studies Institute. Entitled, "Melrose: A Southern Cultural and Literary Center," the publication examines the history of Melrose Plantation, Natchitoches, La., from the French and Spanish periods through 1948.

A native of Louisiana, Gallien graduated with a BA and MA from Northwestern State of Louisiana, Natchitoches. Majoring in history and minoring in government, he was a member of Phi Alpha Theta, a national honor society, and Phi Kappa Phi, a national honor society.

While working on his masters, Gallien served as a graduate assistant instructor at Northwestern. Upon graduation he was a social science instructor for a year at Northwestern before coming to Texarkana College.

Gallien's favorite phase of history is Modern European history. Accordingly, he has toured England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Luxemburg, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, and France. He has also traveled to Mexico and over most of the United States.

For recreation Gallien enjoys hunting — especially doves — and swimming. He classifies himself an avid football fan and both he and his wife enjoy dancing.

Hughes, who usually writes under the name B. R. Hughes, also writes under the name Ray Middlebrooks, and one of the articles in the January issue is under this by-line.

Now a regular contributor to "GunSport", in the past Hughes has had articles in "Fur, Fish, and Game," "Gun Digest," "The American Rifleman," "The VFW Magazine," and others.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

Containment is the name attached to the policy exercised by the U.S. government in Vietnam. In operation since 1946, the containment policy is established on the principle of containing foreign aggression. Containment is a miserable, passive, cruel policy which actually has little to do with freedom; it is a policy to try to keep a minimum kind of status-quo in the world, a policy which tries with primitive means to prevent World War II. Technically, it has nothing to do with fighting communism.

The government's reason for becoming involved is that U.S. aid to Vietnam was necessary to prevent the country from becoming the first phase in the avowed communist plans of guerrilla revolution throughout Southeast Asia. Vietnam would have been a pushover for the communists had not the U.S. exercised her containment policy.

Vacuums of power (such as Vietnam) create unstabilizing effects in world politics and these vacuums give rise to the machinery of containment policy. The principle of tri-polarity—a situation in which the U.S., The Soviet Union, and Red China play a triple game, each opposing others up to a certain point—evidently is in the Vietnam picture. The crux of President Johnson's containment policy strategy is based on the theory that the Soviets are basically treading water (looks kindly towards the U.S. policy) while the U.S. holds Red China at bay.

The pro-government speakers say the U.S. policy position is containment of Red China—to keep Mao Tse Tung from taking control of South Vietnam. The defeat of communism as an ideology is not the case in point. While attempting to contain, the U.S. is striving to maintain, in Saigon, a regime which is suitable to us, that is to perpetuate the division of Vietnam, at least in the short run. Washington has never announced intentions to overthrow the government of the North, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

Sincere opposition to the government's position is the obligation of an American citizen who disagrees with his government's practices. Blind submission, as in Hitler's Germany, has no place in a true democracy. Important Senate leaders such as Mike Mansfield and William Fulbright, as well as our allies, refuse to actively support President Johnson's policy.

The government's policy should be criticized, because trained government experts do not always have policy judgment superior to their critics. The Bay of Pigs was a prime policy blunder. Also, it is absurd to assume that patriotism requires one to support the policy in Vietnam. One can sympathize with the soldiers in Vietnam, one can grieve for them, but you don't have to support the policy they are dying for. Patriotism does not require (Turn to Page Four)

Fall Night Classes Hit Record Having Increased Enrollment

An increasingly active nightlife at Texarkana College is attributed to the evening school, under the direction of Mr. B. J. Murdock, Director of the Evening College Division and Vocational Education.

This evening activity is soon expected to spread to off-campus, non-credit courses in the surrounding Texarkana area.

The Evening Division is designed primarily to assist those citizens in this area who desire additional education, but because of work, children, or other conflict cannot attend full time. However, some full-time students at the College do enroll for at least one night class.

From Monday through Thursday nights the night students enrolled at the college keep the administration and classroom buildings active with nine to 11 classes held each night this semester.

This fall there are four non-credit courses which have been suggested.

Non-credit courses may begin at any time and meet at any pre-arranged intervals. Other courses may be added at any time.

Presently suggested courses are: blueprint reading, pre-flight ground course, basic real estate, and fundamentals of electricity.

The 39 present college credit courses offered at night include accounting, art, English, math, history, and science courses. All are taught by TC faculty members.

Night classes of regular college credit meet one night each week for a semester. Normally each class lasts three hours beginning at 7 p.m.

The usual minimum number of students per class is 15. The College reserves the right to cancel any class with less than this number.

Whether or not credit is given, "all night class offerings depend on the public demand for them," explained Mr. Murdock.

Persons wishing to join non-credit self-improvement classes or start credit courses next January, as well as anyone seeking vocational aid, should obtain their information by calling Murdock at the College.

Murdock is in his office from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and 6 p.m. - 9 p.m. each night, except Friday night, on weekdays. He can best be reached by appointment.

Murdock, explaining the non-credit off-campus courses, said they are given mostly for the benefit of the members of surrounding area business and industrial firms, but are open to the general public.

One such program is a quality control course sponsored by the American Quality Control Society.

The course teaches proper procedures for controlled production in industry.

A new class, expected next spring, is an aviation administration degree program and others can be drawn from requests and compiled.

Night classes hit a record enrollment this year and, though Mr. Murdock expects a usual ten percent drop in January, the spring semester will have about 375 people attending.

The enrollment has doubled since 1959, the first year TC offered night classes, when 207 persons attended.

French Club Plans Christmas Skits

Le Cercle Francais de l'Alliance Francaise continues a very successful year. The club won second place in the Klub Kaleidoscope held in September for their travel theme exhibit.

In October, traveling through Paris and its famous monuments by colored slides was the program for the regular meeting.

Thursday, November 1, the club and other French students traveled to Ouachita Baptist University at Arkadelphia to see a student performance of Jean Paul Sartre's famous play "No Exit".

A Christmas program of French skits and Christmas carols is planned for the December meeting.

Club officers for the school year are: Sarah Braden, president; Donna Fleming, vice-president; Pam Bjork, secretary; Sandra Hobbs, treasurer; and Jua Nyla Hutcheson, reporter.

Student Senate Minutes

A called meeting of the Student Senate was brought to order by the President, Tommy Jones, in the Student Senate Room of the Student Center at 10:00 Thursday morning, October 27, 1966.

A brief discussion was held concerning the Slop Hop in which the President asked for volunteers to help decorate for the dance. He announced that the Senate had hired the Confederates for $130 and that the dance would last from 8:00 to 12:00 P.M.

Joe Kelly gave a report concerning the Student Directories. He reported that he had sold $85 in ads and that he needed help in selling $160 more by Saturday. The President stated that the Alaska Printing Company would start printing the directories Monday, October 31. He then asked for volunteers to help look up phone numbers in the Registrar's Office for the directories. Those volunteering were Bradley Hall, Brenda Goodwin, Julia Goff, James Walker, and Andi Burns.

There was no further business and the meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

Scandinavian Study Invites Collegiates

The Scandinavian Seminar is now accepting applications for its study program in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden for the academic year 1967-68. This opportunity to combine living with learning will have special appeal both for college students and other adults who would find a year of study in a foreign country of special value.

The student in the Seminar program lives for 2 to 8 weeks with a family in his Scandinavian country, using its language daily and sharing in the activities of the community. For the major part of the year he lives and studies at a Folk High School—a residential school for young adults. He is completely separated from his fellow American students during the Seminar year, except for the short periods when he participates in the intensive language courses and the three general sessions conducted by the Seminar in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. An important aspect of the student's Seminar program is an individual study project in a field of special interest to him.

Over 100 American colleges and universities have given either partial or full credit for the Seminar year.

Texarkana College Music Instructor Once Nurse's Aide

Working as a nurse's aide on the men's floor of a German hospital with an American Air Force Base only two blocks away is a single girl's paradise.

And that is how Miss Mary Jane Enderby, the new part-time professor of music, spent her summer after obtaining a BM from North Texas State University.

Miss Enderby and a group of college students were on an exchange-type program that allowed them to spend a summer in Europe. They toured the countries as a group the first part of the summer and then separated, each assigned to a different occupation in a different country.

A Catholic hospital in Freising, Germany, was the destination of the Gainesville native who knew nil about nursing. This was proven on her second day when she was assigned to assist the hospital's head doctor with an eye operation. Her task was to hold the light. Unaccustomed to the surgical room, she had to be relieved.

But not all days were like that. There was the day that she had a birthday and her male patients gave her cake and candy. And there were friends. She met a young German girl working on the same floor who was eager to learn English and, since Miss Enderby wanted to improve her German, they gave each other language lessons. The German girl invited Miss Enderby to her home and often invited her to participate in family outings, thus acquiring first-hand knowledge of German family life.

The American Air Force Base gave Miss Enderby a chance to revert to her native tongue and socialize with other Americans.

A lover of travel, Miss Enderby spent the summer of '65 in Venezuela. She has journeyed to Canada and Mexico several times and has toured 40 of the States.

While working on her MM from the University of Michigan, Miss Enderby became acquainted with a female Finnish exchange student sponsored with a Fulbright Scholarship. Miss Enderby invited her Finnish friend to spend Christmas with her in Texas. The exchange student was amazed to discover that Texans really do wear Stetsons and boots. She returned the hospitality by extending an open invitation to Miss Enderby to visit her country.

A former member of the North Texas Women's Choir and the Chapel Choir, as well as Grand Chorus, which sings with the Dallas Symphony, this is Miss Enderby's first college staff position. She has previously taught private piano and organ lessons. She is presently the organist of the First Baptist Church and is a committee member of the Texarkana Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Intramural Roundup

Circle K showed their strength as they captured the Intramural Football Championship last week. They rolled over the Headhunters by the score of 27-19.

Quarterback Willard Simmons led his team by running and passing their way to the crown.

The Headhunters jumped to an early 7-0 lead when Darrel Fincher ran for the score. He also added the extra point. Circle K rallied with a pass to Nick Williamson which set them up on the Headhunters' 20 yard line. Simmons then spotted John Rainey in the end zone for the TD. Simmons added the extra point with a run around end.

Aroused with Circle K's score, Jerry May ran the kickoff back 80 yards before he was caught from behind. Darrel Fincher put six up for his team with a sprint around end. Not to be outdone, Simmons took their kickoff and squirted through the defensive line for the score. He also added the extra point.

After a short half time rest, Fincher took the kickoff and ran 80 yards for the touchdown. The extra point failed. Circle K dominated the rest of the game. After a long drive, Bob Minton scored on a full-back run up the middle. Minton then connected with Simmons for the point after. The Headhunters couldn't spark and had to kick on their first set of downs. Circle K marched steadily toward the goal. Minton lofted the ball and Simmons cradled it in for the final score of the game.

Cross Country Run

In the cross country run, Carol Knight outlasted the pack by taking the victory by a wide margin. Other finishers found Jeff Wright panting for a second place finish. Michael Koschke ran to a third place finish.

The containment policy might be more acceptable if it were flexible. The U.S. has created a rigid dogma of opposing the communists if they dare to cross any line we draw around them. The government has chartered a dangerous course with its policy—a course that could lead to nuclear war. The war in Vietnam, like all other wars, was caused by capitalists who run the country out of fear of losing another market for their products.
